

Planet Beebonk and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms

All About Beebonk

Beebonk is a small planet near the Azi Star. Proud of their advanced technology, Beebonkians are known to zoom quickly throughout the galaxies on their ‘state of the art’ space crafts. Beebonkian spies often wander through galaxies, spying on schools, businesses, and governments. Beebonk has one large country that is divided into five provinces. Similar to Earth, there are many different races in Beebonk, and hair and skin color differs from area to area throughout the planet.

Physically, Beebonkians are small creatures with large odd-shaped heads. These aliens’ brains, however, have become very small over time because for several centuries Beebonkian aliens have relied on tiny chips implanted into their antennas. These chips hold a tremendous amount of information, but because of the heavy reliance on the chip, Beebonkian ‘brain power’ has deteriorated.

Although the Beebonk aliens are very advanced in science, they have had a history of being cruel and unjust. Realizing the damage done by cruel dictators, spies returning to Beebonk from other planets believed that change was necessary and convinced the rulers to become governed by a democratic parliamentary system. However, citizens felt that something was missing! It seemed to ordinary Beebonkians that rules or laws were being made that appeared to pick on or to be unfair to some citizens. Something needed to be done!

Members of the Beebonk’s federal House of Commons decided that they needed to add new rules to their basic laws. The members of parliament voted to send out a task force to find a country whose basic rules (or constitution) included a charter that guaranteed basic rights for all citizens.

The task force searched through seven galaxies, but they couldn’t find what the people from Beebonk needed. Then the members of the task force from Beebonk found the country Canada – with its Charter of Rights and Freedoms. They thought that they had found the perfect Charter and that it would be great to adopt the Canadian Charter in Beebonk.

Story Four: Razor Cosmos and the Freedom to Associate

Razor Cosmos

Funded by Alberta Justice.

©2008 This is part of the Charter Challenge for Grade Six LawPac Series.

For more information, go to www.abclawnet.ca.

ABC
LAWPAC

Razor Cosmos's Story

Razor Cosmos, a resident of the planet Beebonk, managed a government-owned salvaging company on the edge of the planet's biggest city, Kappa. The company employed 69 workers, all of them from Kappa or surrounding districts.

Problem

One night after work Ethel Elana, one of the workers, was tremendously upset.

“Mr. Cosmos is really treating us unfairly,” she grumbled. “I know I was busy, but he wouldn’t even let me have a coffee break or a lunch break!”

“And you know what?” chipped in Ranger, a fiery but small Beebonkian employee who specialized in the restoration of recreational space ships, “Today I was working on the metal crushing machine and its conveyor belt broke! The snap almost killed me! I reported it to Mr. Cosmos, and he just told me to get back to work.”

Other company workers, hearing the complaints, gathered around and began sharing stories and concerns. They decided that they should get organized and draft some ideas about how their working conditions could be improved. They agreed to meet that night at Ranger’s house.

Imagine their surprise the next morning at work when they were all given the following memo:

Company Memo

To: All workers

From: Management

Please be advised that those workers caught gathering to discuss working conditions or to plan action against the management may lose their employment here. For questions please see Razor Cosmos, Company President.

What Do You Think?

If Beebonk were to adopt the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, do you think that the company workers could successfully challenge the company's rule that prevented employees from meeting outside work to discuss employment issues?

- Yes – the company's rule could be successfully challenged if the rule punished workers who met outside work to discuss employment issues.
- No – the company's rule could not be successfully challenged if the rule punished workers who met outside work to discuss employment issues.

Your Explanation

I think that the company's rule _____ (could/could not) be successfully challenged because

Not sure? Read the information below and on the next page, and then go back and complete your explanation.

Freedom of Association: What does this mean?

Section 2(d) of the Charter gives everyone the right to associate.

Freedom of association is the right to do business with, to hang out with, or to meet and be with others. Within schools, a good example of freedom of association might be the freedom to belong to whatever school club you wish.

Some of the rights of association that are protected by the Charter are those that:

- Allow individuals to form organizations for many reasons including political, religious, and social purposes.
- Allow individuals to belong to any group that is within the law.
- Allow employees to form an association to represent their interests – even if they disagree with the employer.

A Fictional Case Similar to Razor Cosmos

Employees vs Get it There Quick

James and Brittany had just graduated from high school and decided to form a company that supplied machinery parts to large oilfield companies in northern Alberta.

They named their company Get it There Quick because they were proud of how quickly they could deliver their product to the North. The company was so successful the government bought it from them, but James and Brittany continued to run the company.

The Get it There Quick Company hired five drivers who worked long hours and sometimes found themselves driving in bad winter road conditions.

One evening James and Brittany walked into a café near their office building and discovered all five drivers together at a table pouring over some serious looking papers.

“Hi there!” exclaimed Brittany to the group. “What’s up?”

Everyone in the group smiled halfheartedly, but they all looked guilty when they saw their bosses walk in. James noticed that on a sheet of paper one employee had written, “Suggestion for improvements to our working conditions.”

As James and Brittany left the café, James muttered, “We need to make some new rules around here!”

They called a staff meeting the next morning and James found his most gruff voice.

“I would like to announce,” he said, “that it is now against company rules for our employees to get together outside of work to discuss their working conditions.”

“If you are caught as a group discussing negative things about the job, you will be replaced.

The Complaint

The employees of Get it There Quick filed a complaint saying that the company’s new rules violated their rights guaranteed in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The Ruling

The judge ruled in favour of the employees. The company’s rule forbidding employees to gather and talk about improvements to their working conditions contravened section 2(d) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Further Activities

1. Freedom is a fundamental principle of democracy. The Charter protects both individual and collective rights.
 - Brainstorm and arrive at a class definition of “collective rights.”
 - Create a play, story or cartoon showing how freedom of association protects collective rights in Canada.
2. Razor Cosmos has an abundance of friends and family in Beebonk who support his decision. However, many other people did not like the company memo. Write another story that takes place in Beebonk from the point of view of a Beebonk business alien, of a Beebonk student, or of a Beebonk government official who has been approached to write a Charter of Rights for Beebonk.